Podiatry Board of Australia sets fee for 2013/14

The Podiatry Board of Australia has announced the registration fee for podiatrists for 2013/14.

The national fee has been set at $377. It will apply from 1 August 2013 for all practitioners in Australia, except those with a principal place of practice in NSW (see note). Board Chair, Ms Catherine Loughry, said that the Board limited increasing the fee to the national consumer price index (CPI) of 2.5%, to allow the Board to continue its work regulating the profession while not putting undue financial pressure on practitioners.

'The guiding principles of the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme include that it should operate in an efficient, effective and fair way, and that the fees should be reasonable', Ms Loughry said.

'The National Board set the fee at a level that will allow it to fulfil its regulatory obligations, while continuing its focus on being prudent and financially responsible', she said.

The National Boards in the National Scheme have seen an increase in notifications (complaints) over the past year. As the number, complexity and cost of these cases can't be accurately forecast, the Boards will continue to keep fees under close review to ensure careful financial management.

A fees schedule, including the fee arrangements for practitioners whose principal place of practice is NSW, will soon be published on the National Board's website. Any variation to the fees payable by NSW practitioners will be announced by the Health Professional Councils Authority in NSW¹ and will apply from 1 September 2013. A fee schedule reflecting those fees will be published on the National Board's website on 1 September 2013.

More detailed information about the Board's financial operations will be outlined in the Health Profession Agreement between the Board and AHPRA, which will be published on the website soon. This agreement sets out the services AHPRA will provide to support the Board to regulate podiatry.

The regulation of podiatry is funded solely by registrant fees and there is no cross subsidisation between professions that are regulated in the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme.

Practitioners in NSW

NSW is a co-regulatory jurisdiction within the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme (National Scheme) – so the Health Professional Councils in New South Wales and the Health Care Complaints Commission (HCCC) work in tandem to assess and manage concerns about health practitioners' conduct, health and performance.

In all other states and territories, this work is done by the National Boards supported by the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA).

¹ NSW has a co-regulatory arrangement and notifications (complaints) about practitioners in NSW are managed by the Health Professional Councils Authority.

A policy directive from the Ministerial Council (November 2009) sets out arrangements for fee setting between NSW and the rest of the National Scheme. Item 3 in the directive states that NSW registrants will not be required to contribute to the costs of running the national complaints scheme and equally non-NSW registrants will not be required to contribute to the cost of running the NSW complaints scheme. Discussions about fees between AHPRA on behalf of the National Boards and their counterparts in NSW (the Health Professional Councils Authority on behalf of individual health professional councils) have taken place, as they must, in the context of this policy directive.

The way we have calculated the NSW share of National Scheme costs for registration and accreditation has been independently scrutinised.

Quarterly data about the number of practitioners in the National Scheme in each state and territory is published on each National Board website.

In NSW, health practitioners pay an annual registration renewal fee set by their National Boards. The Council for each profession in NSW is responsible for setting the notifications/ complaints element of the registration fee payable by NSW practitioners. The fee NSW practitioners pay is the combined sum of National Scheme costs (for registration and accreditation) and the fee set by the NSW Health Professional Councils for the notification/ complaints component. The NSW government contributes in NSW through funding for the Health Care Complaints Commission. In 2013, the National Scheme component of the national fee increased by just under the CPI of 2.5%. The costs of the notifications/complaint component for podiatry have increased, so the fee payable by NSW practitioners is above the national fee.

Further information on the NSW complaints component of the registration fee is available on the Podiatry Council of NSW website (www.hpca.nsw.gov.au/Podiatry-Council/Home/Home/default.aspx).
